Paragon is known for delivering business models that help decision-makers reshape the future of their organisations and we are looking for modelling professionals who want to make a difference.

Our work has influenced decisions of national importance and clients tell us that our work has created financial gains of well over £100m in recent years. We build Operations, Financial, Sales & Marketing and Environmental models. Currently we are involved in one of the largest renewable energy projects in the UK and we are planning to enter the corporate carbon-reduction market. We do like being involved in decisions & projects that matter.

If you join us in this role we can promise you meaningful project work and the opportunity to make a significant contribution. There is opportunity to be at the heart of our work to manage project work, build client relationships and win new business. You will have full project life cycle responsibility. This will include helping the client understand requirements, formulating the design of the model, either building or managing the build of the model, and actively engaging the client around the significance of the work. And because you will be in the driving seat you will receive the credit for your hard-work & success. You will also be involved some of the wider aspects of our business such as creating project proposals, and having an input into staff reviews. You will have the freedom & support to develop our own leadership style.

Our working environment is relaxed & friendly but professional. We think you will enjoy working here and avoiding big-business politics. We are a compact business that is young at heart and we like new ambitious ideas. You will be given plenty of opportunity to influence where we go and to grow with the business. We believe it is important to carry on learning throughout life and in this role you can expect to acquire new managerial & commercial skills.

You may currently be working for a much larger company but lack variety of work or opportunity to progress. We are interested to hear from you if you have simulation experience in either Witness, Flexsim or Simul8, a good numerate degree and have demonstrable skills and experience of using either Excel/VB/VBA to build tools that improve business performance. You should have a successful track-record of delivering exceptional business planning & improvement tools and believe you are made for a project leadership role.

Up to £34k plus bonus & a wide range of benefits.
